PREFERRED DEATH TO TAKING FARES.

AFTER ONE DAY AS CONDUCTOR ROGERS KILLED HIMSELF

Returned Home Cold, Tired and Discouraged, and Shot Himself in the Heart.

William Rogers, who boarded with William J. Harkins at No. 104 Cherryman avenue, Brooklyn, was found dead in bed today with a fatal ball in his heart. Rogers committed suicide because he was despondent over his prospects in life. He had tried being a Brooklyn conductor for one day. He was formerly a messenger boy employed by the American District Telegraph Company at No. 188 Montague street, Brooklyn, and had worked his way up to a clerkship, which paid him, however, only $7 a week. He became discouraged over the small pay and decided to get something better. He applied to the Brooklyn and Coney Island Trolley Company for work and was put on as an extra conductor yesterday. He returned home at night cold, tired and discouraged. He said he had made six trips and had earned $1.50. While the pay was a little better than he had been receiving in the telegraph office the work was so hard that he did not think he could stand it. In addition to the physical hardships the duties were exacting. He had to look out for the transfers, see that passengers did not spit on the floor, and at the same time be sure and collect every nickel.

His friends tried to encourage him, but he went to bed early feeling very despondent. This morning Harkins went to the young man's room to call him and found him dead. He has relatives in Brooklyn, and the police are looking for them. Rogers was twenty-one years old.

GOT MALVAR'S BROTHER.

Chief Surgeon of Batangas Insurgents is Captured.

MANILA, Feb. 11.—A brother of Malvar the insurgent leader who was captured last October by the Central Philippine Committee, as the successor of Aguinaldo, and who appointed himself Captain-General of the Philippine forces has been captured. He was Chief Surgeon of the Batangas insurgents. A strong insurgent post has been captured near Calamba, Laguna Province. A number of rifles, bolos and six type-writing machines fell into the hands of the Americans.

It is believed this post formed Malvar's headquarters.

PLACE UNTENABLE. WON'T PAY RENT.

WINTER'S ANSWER TO HIS LANDLORD'S SUIT.

Says the House Fits Let to Him Has Been Badly Damaged by Evictions.

Louis B. Pflax is suing John A. Winter for $9,000,000, alleged to be due for rent of the property at No. 46 University place for five years and three months. The answer served by Hoffman & Wolfe today presents some novel reasons for not paying, and if the reasons are held to be good by the Court there is no reason why Winter should not do business rent free for the rest of his life. Winter occupied the place under a five-year lease made Jan. 1, 1900, at $2,000 a year, but he quit paying three months before the end of the time because of the damage done to the premises by the evictions. The ceiling came down, the wall paper came off and all plaster work fell down from the north wall, the plumbing was displaced and the building became absolutely uninhabitable.

ARRESTED FOR PADDING PAYROLL.

FACTORY TIMEKEEPER AND WOMAN ARRAIGNED.

He Had Kept Her Name on Even After She Had Left the Place.

Morris Ithkow, seventeen years old, of No. 500 Graham avenue, and Jennie Ithkow, of the same age, who lives at No. 101 Seigel street, were arraigned in the Ewen Street Magistrate's Court, Brooklyn, today to answer a charge of larceny. Morris is a time-keeper in a brass finishing establishment at Meeker avenue and North Henry street and Jennie worked there until a month ago, when she resigned. August Hodman, the superintendent of the establishment, found in a desk in Morris' handwriting, the following letter, which he says is in Morris' handwriting: "Dear Sweetheart: I am sorry you have left our place. Don't let any one and I will keep your name on as a full hand. I will meet you Monday. I am yours, MORRIS."

The superintendent investigated and found that Jennie Ithkow's name was still on the payroll. He notified the police and Morris and Jennie were arrested as they were walking together.

TUNNEL PETITION SENT TO ALBANY.

SUBURBAN RESIDENTS ASK IMMEDIATE RELIEF.

Request that Steam Power Be Prohibited and Electricity Substituted.

(Special to The Evening World.) A second long petition signed by thousands of suburban residents of Mount Vernon, New Rochelle, White Plains, Yonkers and other towns in Westchester County was forwarded to the Railroad Commissioners today, asking that the use of steam power be prohibited and electricity substituted for any railroad operation to operate any railroad by steam power within the Park Avenue tunnel in New York city. It was also requested that the New York Central Railroad be compelled to substitute electricity for steam.

At a meeting of the Board of Trade held to have the Board of Trade throughout the county send large delegations to Albany before the Legislature tomorrow to agitate the matter. The petitioners intend to keep agitating until they get relief.

FRANK DANIELS OPENS WITH "MISS SIMPLICITY."

Comedian Makes the Most of His Part in Barnett's New Opera—His Curtain Speech a Hit.

Frank Daniels signalled his return to Broadway by coaching on the premises of Richard Mansfield and the Wolf Hopper. History records that Mr. Mansfield has intensified the gloom of many trapezoids by his flighted oratory, and the Hopper musical comedies have served as settings for his act. Last night at the Casino Mr. Daniels dextrously rescued "Miss Simplicity" by an oratorical intermezzo.

Aside from its glitter and noise, no one brought away a very clear idea of the new Barnett musical comedy, but that certain speech of Mr. Daniels is a delightful memory. It may have been impromptu, a bit of apt foolery on the stage, but born of the realized necessity of doing something to the audience. Whether of the moment or a matter of forethought, it was telling. With well-remembered unctious of voice and gesture and exuberant facial contortions, Daniels aptly footed the light comedy of the actor, borrowed the political campaigner, the platform lecturer, the pulp orator, winding up with a meaningless string of disjointed words and phrases, but every grimace, every gesture, the utter foolishness of the all, provoked endless laughter. These five minutes of Daniels compensated for three hours of come opera humbug.

While Daniels held the stage the production seemed to move with life and spirit, but the interval given over to the first principals, the audience grew restless. It was not so much the lack of the evening as the limited use of Daniels' songs. The interregnum child, is the only bit that recalls the cleverness Mr. Barnett displayed in 1901. The success of the play hangs on the success of the songs. The complaint is justified that the star has too little to do.

"Miss Simplicity" offers nothing strikingly original in plot or musical expression, but it is staged lavishly, and some of the songs are selected by the young women who help to make the stage picture. They are pleasing and some of the songs are quite good. The production features a diamond necklace, a half waltz between her neck and shoulder without any visible means of holding it.

Even in so large an auditorium as the Casino the work of the principals, chorus and orchestra, was a bit too strenuous, lagging evening. At times the volume of the music was so great that the audience was actually discomforted.

PRIMROSE AND DOCKSTADER. Jack Haverly, Jack Haverly, water, super, boat.

We trust, shade of the poet, that Jack Haverly is leading a troupe of heavenly minstrels with a plug hat on his head, one on each of his wings and that you, his poetic admirer, are standing at the edge of the golden pavement listening to the music of the band.

For instance, they have discarded the shades of Field and Haverly, this mistaken idea of improvement will infect you with as much grief as you can gather in your present surroundings. We of the earth, who wander with the poet, where Jack Haverly is—although we know he is where the poet is—well and refuse to be comforted. Please, Mr. Primrose and Mr. Dockstader, reinstate the shades of Field and Haverly.

For your information, shades of Haverly and Field, and solid bodies of New Yorkers, we will say that the young men of minstrelsy, concerning whom this is written, have followed to improve upon the brand of enjoyment served up to us by Jack Haverly.

For instance, they have discarded the shades of Field and Haverly, this mistaken idea of improvement will infect you with as much grief as you can gather in your present surroundings. We of the earth, who wander with the poet, where Jack Haverly is—although we know he is where the poet is—well and refuse to be comforted. Please, Mr. Primrose and Mr. Dockstader, reinstate the shades of Field and Haverly.
